Khadr set for a plea bargain?

Toronto-born Omar Khadr, 24, has been held at notorious Cuba-based prison for eight years Stands accused of killing an American soldier in Afghanistan

The resumption of Omar Khadr's much-delayed war-crimes trial was pushed back another week Thursday amid discussions that would see him plead guilty, apparently in exchange for serving most of his sentence in Canada.

Khadr's Pentagon-appointed lawyer, Lt.-Col. Jon Jackson, confirmed the trial of Guantanamo Bay's youngest inmate would now resume Oct. 25 rather than on Monday as scheduled.

"We'd like to resolve this thing and get Omar out of Guantanamo."
NATE WHITLING, LAWYER FOR OMAR KHADR

Jackson refused to comment on the plea talks.

However, one of Khadr's Canadian lawyers confirmed defence and prosecution were deep in discussions to avoid a trial, but denied a deal had already been reached.

"As of now, there's no deal," Nate Whitling said from Edmonton. "The two sides are talking. We're hoping for a potential deal."

Whitling refused to discuss any details of the talks.

Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon's office also said there was no deal with the United States to return Khadr to Canada.

House collapse blocks off roads

A house under renovation in the city's east end partially collapsed Thursday afternoon and left the immediate area blocked off from traffic.

The basement of the house located on 477 Scarborough Rd. was being excavated but subcontractors were not on scene when the collapse occurred, Toronto Fire platoon chief Dan MacIsaac said.

The incident occurred just before 1:30 p.m.

Police said there were no injuries and no damage to surrounding property.

Const. Tony Vella of the Toronto police said there may be traffic delays on nearby Gerrard Street East and Victoria Park Avenue.

Police could not confirm how long the immediate area would be blocked off.

There were also reports of a strong gas smell, but the fire department confirmed there was no gas leak.

MacIsaac said the gas line to the house was turned off at around 2:30 p.m.

The Rocket makes its subway debut

Yonge line capacity to rise 30 per cent once new signalling system is installed, along with the new trains

The better way is about to get better yet, Mayor David Miller said at the Thursday launch of the TTC's new Toronto Rocket subway trains on the platform of Downsview Station.

With open gangways that allow a full-length view of the six-car trains, enhanced security features and an open-floor design, the Rockets will carry up to 10 per cent more riders and offer greater mechanical reliability.

The cars included in the $710-million purchase, shared by all three levels of government, were made at Bombardier's Thunder Bay plant.

Miller said he has no regrets about sole-sourcing the trains to Bombardier in 2006 as a way of keeping the company's plant open in northern Ontario.

The 234 subway cars to be delivered over the next two years will begin running by early next year on the Yonge line.

The cars feature an antimicrobial coating on stanchions to prevent the spread of germs; a more open design inside the doors to provide easier loading for crowds and people using wheelchairs or strollers; three flip-up seats inside the door for accessibility, and new emergency features that automatically train cameras on the area from which an alarm has been triggered.

The public will get a look at the Toronto Rockets sometime in the next couple of weeks, when the first train will be parked for viewing, probably at Sheppard Station, said TTC chief general manager Gary Webster.

▶ Activists rallied at the Ontario legislature Thursday, demanding that Premier Dalton McGuinty protect provincial water from industry and developmental pollution.

Activists urge protection for Ontario's water

Organizers say they want Queen's Park to create a provincial water strategy that will protect Ontario's watersheds from what they call a growing crisis

The Ontario legislature was a little water-logged Thursday after activists brought their concerns about protecting the province's water — along with some jars of H2O.

Environmentalists, labour activists and human rights advocates were among those who rallied at the legislature during a rainy afternoon.

The activists say Premier Dalton McGuinty should be protecting Ontario's water from pollution caused by industry and development.

As speakers addressed the rally, long blue banners waved overhead and protesters carrying jars of their local drinking water walked through the fluttering blue tunnels to deliver their message.

"We need real protection for our water more than ever, but Premier McGuinty is taking us down the wrong path."
MAUDE BARLOW, COUNCIL OF CANADIANS

Josh Garfinkel, a campaigner for Earthroots, said the government should be looking at the "big picture" to see how much water is available and how much is being lost to urban sprawl, climate change and pollution.

"There is an urgent need for a provincial water strategy with teeth and the leadership necessary to enforce it," Garfinkel said.

Maude Barlow, national chairwoman of the Council of Canadians, added: "There is a global water crisis happening right now and Ontario is already feeling the impacts."

Other speakers complained about loopholes in current regulations that allow problematic projects to proceed to the point where full-scale community organizing is the only way to stop them.

Hudak backs flat-rate electricity prices

Ontario residents should be able to choose flat-rate electricity prices from their local utility instead of being forced to pay time-of-use rates, says Conservative Leader Tim Hudak.

But Energy Minister Brad Duguid said Hudak's energy proposals are unworkable, and would drag the province back into the past.

Hudak told the Ontario Energy Association Thursday that time-of-use rates should not be the only option for consumers who haven't signed retail contracts.

Under time-of-use rates, consumers pay more for electricity during peak use periods, such as mornings and evenings, and pay lower prices on weekends and overnight when demand is moderate.

"Those who can adapt their behaviour should be given a time-of-use structure that will reward conservation," he said following the speech

"But for the families who cannot, they should be given the choice at the very least of a flat rate."

TANYA TALAGA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ Tim Hudak

Hudak said the Liberals under Premier Dalton McGuinty are treating all families alike.

"He's got to give an option to the senior citizen who Dalton McGuinty is lecturing to get up at two in the morning to do her wash, or the shift worker who's impacted. So offer choice to consumers."

Energy minister Brad Duguid said running a dual price system is unworkable: "That kind of an option would be very, very difficult for local distribution companies to administer."

He also noted the government has introduced an energy and property tax relief credit for low-income Ontarians hit hard by hydro price increases, granting eligible seniors up to $1,025.

Comparison

- Tim Hudak did not describe how a system with the option of time-of-use rates or flat all-day rates would work for consumers, saying that other jurisdictions like California and Florida have worked out the details.
- But at one Florida utility, Gulf Power, the flat rate of 12.6 cents US per kilowatt hour is almost one-third higher than Ontario's highest time-of-use rate of 9.9 cents Cdn.
- The flat rate of 12.6 cents at Gulf Power compares with its time-of-use prices that begin at 9.2 cents per kWh for off-peak times — almost double Ontario's 5.3 cents for off-peak between 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. weekdays and on weekends.

Police charge 12 after 2004 grow-op bust

Ontario Provincial Police say a dozen people from Ontario and Quebec have been charged six years after a massive marijuana grow-op was uncovered in Barrie.

Police told a news conference Thursday they rounded up the 12 suspects Wednesday and seized property and vehicles worth more than $7.5 million under proceeds-of-crime legislation.

The property includes the former brewery building, another property in Elliot Lake, Ont., three vehicles and cash.

30K
The number of marijuana plants seized in the raid.

The suspects, most due in court Friday, are charged with drug and criminal enterprise offences.

Police say the investigation that led to the new arrests began 16 months ago.

"The focus of the ongoing investigation was to identify and bring to justice the operating minds of this criminal enterprise," Det.-Insp. Andy Karski said.

Officers swarmed a former Molson brewery in Barrie in January 2004 and seized marijuana plants with a street value pegged at millions of dollars.

At the time, police called it the largest marijuana grow operation to be uncovered in Canada.

MAYORAL RACE

Pressure on Ford after Rossi's resignation

Rocco Rossi's exit from the Toronto mayoral race puts pressure on Rob Ford to abandon his risk-averse campaign in the 10-day sprint to the finish, observers say.

"There's no doubt now it's a two-man fight, as George Smitherman has been saying," said Nelson Wiseman, a U of T political scientist. "The question is if Rob Ford will continue his 'peekaboo' strategy or drop that. He needs some attention. He can't be perceived as fading out."

Rossi folded his campaign Wednesday after a poll pegged his support at four per cent of decided voters, compared to 31 per cent for Smitherman and 30 per cent for Ford. The poll revealed a two-man race coming down to "those who want to stop what Mr. Ford describes as the gravy train, and those who want to stop Mr. Ford," Rossi said, urging voters to demand Ford and Smitherman offer them something "to vote for." Use surplus, tax hike to balance books: Pantalone

Mayoral candidate Joe Pantalone says Toronto's 2011 budget can be balanced by hiking residential property taxes by 2.5 per cent, selling some land and utilizing a $180-million surplus from this year.

While the year isn't over yet, Pantalone said he has inside information from city staff that there will be $180 million unspent in the $9.2-billion 2010 operating budget.

"It's a real number," Pantalone, currently deputy mayor, said of the expected surplus.

"I've checked with the city staff about that and that number comes (out) after that checking."

The left-wing standard-bearer, who is badly trailing front-runners George Smitherman and Rob Ford, said he will not follow Rocco Rossi's lead and drop out of the race.

Pantalone said he's a city builder who would maintain services, while Smitherman and Ford would cut thousands of city jobs through attrition.

▶ Joe Pantalone

If either of his competitors wins the mayor's chair, "there's going to be less librarians, less parks workers, less people working in the arts and culture, less people working on environmental initiatives.

"Come on. This is Toronto. This is not Buffalo or Cleveland."

Seniors feel cast off at the ballot

- This municipal election, the city has 75 fewer polling stations
- But roughly 5,500 more people than last year have registered to vote

"We all cry about voter turnout. But when you have basically an entire village of people who don't have a polling station you're not going to get high turnout."

JOSH COLE, WARD 15 (EGLINTON-LAWRENCE) COUNCIL CANDIDATE

When Lilian Ramsuchit learned voting in the mayoral election might mean pushing her walker for 50 minutes round-trip, she threw up her hands and said, "Forget that!"

"I wouldn't go fall over in the road just to vote," she added. Ramsuchit, 59, just had double knee surgery. She also has breathing problems.

So do her friends Sonadai Mukhlall, 69, and Reuitia Chawharja and Kusm Hamid, both 71. The women are longtime residents of Lotherton Pathway, a community just off Caledonia Road. It contains thousands of potential voters, many of them low-income seniors who don't have a car.

In previous years, the women have voted on the main floor of a local building. Now they have to walk to Joyce Public School, about a half-kilometre away. The advance polling station, at Glen Long Community Centre, is even farther away.

City spokesperson Carole Boughannam explained the poll was moved because of stricter adherence to the province's Election Act, which requires clerks to ensure all voting locations are accessible to electors with disabilities.

The required changes would include: Barrier-free path of travel from the parking lot/sidewalk; barrier-free parking; where parking is provided, door operators or accessible doors; and adequate lighting. Boughannam said the Lotherton Pathway complex did not meet the accessibility criteria.

Josh Colle, who's running in the local ward (Ward 15, Eglinton-Lawrence), says the city has left many seniors out in the cold and is "hiding behind wheelchair accessibility."

Colle said this "amalgamation of polls" is a problem he's been seeing across his ward. He doesn't buy that there aren't enough suitable locations.

"I've had store owners falling over me to rent their wheelchair-accessible storefronts," he said, adding, "It seems like the city is doing everything possible to not entice people to vote."

JUDGE ALLOWS MEDIA REAL-TIME UPDATES

Journalists covering the guilty plea and sentencing of Col. Russell Williams will be able to provide the public live text updates from within the courtroom, a judge has ordered.

Following a closed-door session Thursday with lawyers representing victims, the crown, media and Williams, Justice Robert Scott replaced an earlier order banning all electronic devices from the hearing, which begins Monday.

Saying it was "important that the press have a position" on the ban, Scott said journalists with credentials will be able to text bring phones, BlackBerry devices and laptops into court to provide real-time text reporting.

Williams, 47, intends to plead guilty to first-degree murder in the deaths of air force flight attendant Cpl. Marie-France Comeau, 38, of Brighton and Jessica Lloyd, 27, of Belleville.

He has also indicated he will plead guilty to home invasion and sexual assaults of two women in the Tweed area, along with 82 fetish break, enter and thefts in Ottawa, Tweed and Belleville.

The order lifting the media electronics ban came after an application by the Ottawa Citizen.

Four fires across city

Firefighters had a busy night battling several fires in the city.

About 100 people had to be evacuated from an apartment building on Close Avenue around 1 a.m. Thursday when a fire started on the 11th floor.

Officials consider that fire suspicious and one person is in custody. Another west end fire sent one person to hospital with non-life threatening smoke inhalation injuries.

Another blaze tore through six garages at Jane and Wilson. A dollar store on the Danforth also erupted in flames around 3:30 a.m. No one was hurt.

Yorkdale mall saw major jump in traffic when Victoria's Secret opened store Newly-added U.S. retailers helping drive consumer spending

RICK EGLINTON/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

▶ The Victoria's Secret store at Yorkdale. Shoppers are drawn to American brands.

Traffic at Yorkdale shopping mall jumped 40 per cent the day the hotly anticipated lingerie retailer Victoria's Secret opened its first GTA store in August.

That's the power some big U.S. brands can wield in Canada, says mall manager Anthony Casalanguida.

"A lot of Canadian shoppers are very familiar with American brands. There was a lot of pent-up demand for them," he said Thursday.

With Canadian retail sales running on average three to four percentage points ahead of the U.S. market in recent years, more American chains are looking to move north of the border, according to a report by Moody's Investor Services.

But with consumer debt fuelling much of the increase in Canadian retail sales, can the fire keep glowing, Darren Kirk, senior vice-president at Moody's asks in his report entitled Canadian Retail Competition Heating Up.

The list of U.S. retailers with Canadian plans includes cheap chic discounter Target Corp., specialty clothing firm J. Crew, and Marshalls department stores, a sister chain to Winners and HomeSense, the report says.

They will be joining some high-profile recent entrants, including Brooks Brothers and Crate & Barrel, the report says. U.S. retailers already here are expanding their Canadian operations, the report adds.

Having saturated their home market, many American retailers are looking to Canada as a first stop on the road to global expansion, the report notes. The geographic proximity and shared language make it a natural starting point.

As well, sales here have been more robust during the recent economic downturn than in the U.S., where the housing market and jobs took a bigger hit during the recent financial crisis.

Retail profit margins in Canada have also been relatively strong, the report says.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Dark clouds?

- There are potential headwinds, including rising consumer debt levels, a volatile Canadian dollar and increased competition, the Moody's report cautions.
- Canadians' debt levels are currently manageable, however if interest rates rise that could slow consumer spending, the report says.

Tory initiative could have unwanted costs

Following arrival of ships carrying Tamil migrants, PM has vowed to deter human smuggling at all costs

For the Conservative government, the booming global industry of moving people illegally into stable countries is heinous and must be stopped, with tough legislation expected next week.

But for Cristina, human smuggling is a lifeline.

The mother of four from El Salvador is now safe in Ottawa — but only because she hired human smugglers twice to escape violent gangs in her home country, she says.

"If I had stayed, they wouldn't have just killed me. They would have killed my children," the soft-spoken, stoic refugee said in an interview with The Canadian Press.

The Tories plan to introduce legislation that takes direct aim at smugglers like those who arranged Cristina's passage.

"This government will be coming forward after the parliamentary break, with comprehensive legislation designed to ensure we deter this kind of behaviour," Prime Minister Stephen Harper said last week, "because I know for the vast majority of Canadians, queue jumping and human smuggling in our immigration system is completely unacceptable."

But finding a way to deter smuggling without inadvertently making things worse for legitimate refugees is almost impossible, experts say.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Supply/demand

Research on human smuggling shows that the harsher countries are on the middlemen, the more expensive and more dangerous become their services.

- Demand for human smuggling climbs unabated, because desperate people will pay any price. So crackdowns intensify the criminal aspect of smuggling, and do little to deter it.
- "It's like absolute classic market economics," said James Hathaway, director of the Program in Refugee and Asylum Law at the University of Michigan. "We've created the market."

Relations sour between U.A.E and Canada

Dispute over push by Dubai-based Emirates and Abu Dhabi's Etihad to expand long-haul flights to Canada

The United Arab Emirates lobbied against Canada's bid for a UN Security Council seat in the latest blow to relations that soured after disputes over airline routes, a U.A.E. official said Thursday.

The Gulf country's opposition followed harsh complaints about Canada's refusal to open more flights for the fast-growing carriers Emirates and Etihad.

The government in Abu Dhabi is also forcing Canada to leave a military base that is used to supply Canadian forces in Afghanistan.

Earlier this week, Canada pulled out of the race for one of the non-permanent Security Council seats after falling behind rivals in the first rounds of voting. The defeat was seen as a significant setback for a G-7 economic power.

The U.A.E. official said the opposition was based on Canada's "protectionist" trade policies and perceptions that Ottawa is weak on supporting Arab causes in the region, including efforts to ease the Israeli restrictions on Palestinians in Gaza.

It's unclear how much the U.A.E. could have swayed UN sentiments against Canada, but the country carries influence beyond its small size because of extensive international business ties.

The U.A.E. has pushed hard to expand nonstop flights to Canada to serve major Indian and Pakistani markets, which have significant family and business ties to North America.

Tories on run from escorts and strippers

- Will their jobs be listed on the federal vacancy list?
- Never, sniff the feds — story is 'completely false'

ADRIAN WYLD/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The federal Tories are flatly denying they are considering listing job vacancies for escorts and strippers on the federal job bank.

The Toronto Star reported that a draft memo from the federal human resources department said job vacancies for exotic dancers and escorts are now acceptable for posting on the federally housed, but provincially run, job bank website.

But a spokesperson for Human Resources Minister Diane Finley calls the story "completely and utterly false."

That's good, because Ontario training minister John Milloy said he wasn't going to allow vacancies for these jobs to be posted on the provincial job bank, no matter what Ottawa thought.

He said he won't suggest to new graduates and laid-off workers that they should apply for jobs as strippers.

Finley's spokesperson Ryan Sparrow said the federal government would never have approved listing such jobs.

"The 'draft note' cited by the reporter has not been seen by the minister's office, nor would it ever have been a policy under consideration by our government," Sparrow said in an email.

Joyful families get set to embrace Chile's miners
World offers jobs and honours after amazing rescue

Chile's 33 rescued miners were itching to reunite with families and sleep in their own beds Thursday.

But after spending the night in hospital they had to wait — examinations by doctors came first.

Meanwhile, on the day after the 23-hour rescue that kept the world spellbound, relatives were organizing welcome-home parties — and trying to organize an avalanche of celebrity functions and job offers. Among them:

▶ Spain's Real Madrid football team invited the 33 to attend a game in their stadium.

▶ A Greek mining company offered to fly each one, with a companion, for a week's vacation in the Mediterranean.

▶ Chile's football federation said it would offer a job with its youth teams to Franklin Lobos, a former national team player who drove a taxi to make ends meet before he was caught in the Aug. 5 mine collapse.

‘Zionists will perish’, says Ahmadinejad

Iranian president taunts Israel from across border in Lebanon Israeli attack helicopters hover nearby

HUSSEIN MALLA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad taunted archenemy Israel Thursday from just across the tense border in southern Lebanon where he rallied tens of thousands of supporters of ally Hezbollah as Israeli attack helicopters buzzed in the skies nearby.

Ahmadinejad, who has repeatedly said Israel should be wiped off the map and denied the Holocaust, vowed that “resistance” forces will liberate Palestinians from Israeli control. The U.S. and Israel called his visit to the border region of southern Lebanon a provocation.

“The world should know that Zionists will perish,” he said at a rally in the border village of Bint Jbeil, which was one of the hardest-hit areas in the 2006 Israeli-Hezbollah war. It has since been rebuilt with the help of heavy investments from Iran.

“Occupied Palestine will be liberated from the filth of occupation by the strength of resistance and through the faith of the resistance,” Ahmandinejad said to the crowd waving a sea of Lebanese, Iranian and Hezbollah flags.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu responded to Ahmadinejad’s remarks at the border by saying Israel knows how to protect itself.

“We heard today the cursing and invectives from the Lebanese border. The best answer to the deriders was given here 62 years ago — the state and all that we’ve built and created since,” Netanyahu said.

U.S. keeping Europe terror alert active

A European terrorist plot is still enough of a threat for the United States to keep its current travel advisory, the U.S. State Department’s counterterrorism co-ordinator said Thursday.

The State Department advised American citizens living or travelling in Europe earlier this month to take more precautions following reports that terrorists may be plotting attacks on a European city, possibly a shooting spree similar to the deadly 2008 Mumbai attacks in India.

“We don’t (think) the current circumstances warrant rescinding the alert,” said Daniel Benjamin, the U.S. counterterrorism co-ordinator. “We think the situation is pretty much the same.” Benjamin insisted the information was credible and had been gathered over several months. Some of the plot details came from Ahmed Siddiqui, a German citizen captured in Afghanistan in July.

Woman faces attempted murder rap

A 31-year-old woman has been charged with attempted murder after an incident involving two patients at a health-care facility in southwestern Ontario.

Police said they were called to the facility in the St. Thomas area Wednesday night.

The facility is not being identified.

The victim, a 44-year-old woman, was treated at the St.Thomas Elgin General Hospital for minor injuries. Tricia McMahon, of Central Elgin, was in court Thursday to face charges of attempted murder and assault with a weapon.

Serbs promise crackdown after this week's rioting

National Security Council praised 'professional reaction' by police

Serbian authorities must further curb extremist groups and punish all those who took part in rioting this week, the government declared Thursday, insisting the Balkan nation still remained stable.

Parliament's security board said Serbia's constitutional order has not been jeopardized, even though extremists have tried to create unrest.

The National Security Council, meanwhile, urged a continued and determined fight against organized crime, saying that extremist organizations seek to "jeopardize the security of the state and the citizens."

The statements and Wednesday's meeting of the National Security Board apparently aimed to show state resolve after Serbia experienced two riots in three days. Far-right groups attacked police Sunday with firebombs, stones and stun grenades.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Attacks

Officials say the attacks are designed to undermine Serbia's pro-Western government, which is seeking to steer the country toward integration with the European Union. The handling of the gay pride parade was considered a major test of Serbia's ability to protect human rights.

Clash at Acropolis

Protesters barricaded themselves inside, padlocked the gates and refused to allow visitors into the grounds until their demands were met

Riot police clashed with protesting Culture Ministry workers barricading the ancient Acropolis on Thursday, using tear gas to clear the entrance to Greece's most famous landmark. But the monument remained closed for the rest of the day as guards there launched a strike in solidarity with the evicted protesters.

Protest organizers said they would gather again at the Acropolis early Friday, but it was unclear whether they would attempt to block the entrance.

Up to 100 workers on short-term contracts had kept the ancient citadel closed since Wednesday.

County passes animal abuse list

A U.S. county has passed a law this week to create the country's first animal abuse registry, requiring people convicted of cruelty to animals to register or face jail time and fines.

The law in Suffolk County, on the eastern half of Long Island east of New York City, was created in the hope of preventing animal abusers from inflicting more cruelty — or moving on to human victims.

"We know there is a very strong correlation between animal abuse and domestic violence," said Suffolk County legislator Jon Cooper, the bill's sponsor. "Almost every serial killer starts out by torturing animals, so in a strange sense we could end up protecting the lives of people."

The online list will be open to the public, so that pet owners or the merely curious can find out whether someone living near them is on it.

Legislation

- The law was passed unanimously Tuesday in the suburban New York City county of 1.5 million people.
- A spokesman for county executive Steve Levy said he intends to sign the legislation.
- It then requires a 30-day review by state officials before it goes on the books.

Pakistan's prime minister escapes death

Islamic militants arrested for plot to kill Yousuf Raza Gilani Suspects accused of having ties to al-Qaida

ANJUM NAVEED/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Yousuf Raza Gilani

Pakistani police arrested a group of Islamist militants plotting to kill the prime minister in a gun and suicide bomb attack at his house, officials said yesterday. The seven men also are accused of targeting other government leaders for assassination.

Militants in Pakistan have frequently attacked government officials, security officers and political leaders as part of a campaign to destabilize the U.S.-allied government and take over the state. Opposition leader Benazir Bhutto was killed in a gun and bomb attack near Islamabad in 2007.

The conspiracy against Prime Minister Yousuf Raza Gilani was nearly complete, police officials said.

The suspects are accused of belonging to the al-Qaida-linked group Lashkar-e-Jhangvi. Their plan included monitoring Gilani's movements and storming his private residence in the central city of Multan with guns and a suicide bomber, police investigator Waris Bharwana said.

"These terrorists were arrested in a timely fashion, and surely we have averted an attack on the prime minister," he said.

Amazon gets OK to patent

Amazon has won a victory in the Canadian court battle to patent its online payment system, a technology that allows consumers to buy with a speedy click of a mouse.

The Federal Court of Canada overturned a 2009 decision by the Commission of Patents, which didn't allow the "one-click" method to be patented in Canada. The federal court said Thursday the system is a "business method" and is patentable in Canada. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Judge to terror suspect: 'You don't know the rules'

A lawyer advising a Nigerian man accused of trying to use explosives in his underwear to blow up an international flight will get access to the evidence, a judge ruled Thursday over the defendant's objections.

The 15-minute hearing was the first since Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab said he wanted to represent himself on charges stemming from the attempted Christmas Day attack. He said it wasn't necessary for his standby counsel, Anthony Chambers, to look at the evidence.

Charges

▶ Abdulmutallab is charged with attempting to blow up Northwest Airlines Flight 253, which was headed to Detroit from Amsterdam with nearly 300 people aboard.

U.S. District Judge Nancy Edmunds disagreed and ordered prosecutors to share it. "I'm overriding you on this ... You don't have legal training," Edmunds said.

"You don't know the rules of evidence, the rules of criminal procedure."

Chambers, who was appointed only to advise Abdulmutallab, needs to see the evidence to answer any questions, the judge said. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Haitians start new life in African country

Senegal president moved to help displaced Haitians, arguing they're sons and daughters of Africa

REBECCA BLACKWELL/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Senegalese President Abdoulaye Wade with Haitian students.

More than 160 Haitian students who left their earthquake-shattered country to take up Senegal's offer of free housing and scholarships were embraced by its president amid questions of how the poor African country can devote resources to foreigners.

The young men and women arrived in a chartered jet late Wednesday and were given T-shirts to wear that said: "Thank You President Abdoulaye Wade."

They are the first batch of arrivals as part of a grand scheme that began when Wade saw images of the devastated Caribbean nation following the January quake.

His plan was criticized at home because Senegal's GDP is only marginally higher than Haiti's and the country is beset by rising unemployment and spiralling food prices. Thousands of Senegalese risk their lives every year trying to reach Europe on flimsy boats in a dire bid for a better life, much as people in Haiti have braved the high seas trying to reach Florida.

Editorials described it as another of the aging president's grandiose projects intended to cement his reputation as an international leader, rather than addressing his citizens' needs.

"It's true that Senegal is not that much better off than Haiti," said Peterson Paul, a 22-year-old sociology undergraduate student who lost his house in the Jan. 12 quake and was living under a tarp when he learned of Wade's offer. "But our educational system was rocked by the earthquake. It's in a precarious state. I think it will be better for me here ... and I had no idea that they would do all of this for us."

Wade was especially criticized at home when he went so far as to say that he would be willing to hand over a region of Senegal if a large number of Haitians were to agree to relocate here. The project has since been scaled back and the students will receive free housing — not land.

The 163 students will also be offered scholarships in a nation where the campus of Senegal's largest university is frequently paralyzed by strikes because scholarships are paid late.

The students were greeted upon arrival in Dakar by dancers and traditional praise singers. Dozens of Senegalese students also held up signs that said: "Welcome to the home of your ancestors."

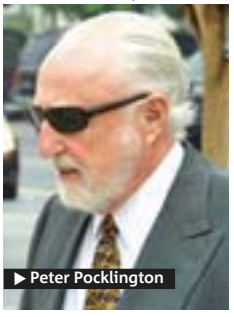
Pocklington gets reprieve

REED SAXON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



▶ Peter Pocklington

Sentencing for Peter Pocklington on a perjury charge in California has been delayed because his lawyer was late filing paperwork in the case.

The former owner of the National Hockey League's Edmonton Oilers was in court Thursday morning for sentencing, but U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips put the case over until Oct. 27 to give her time to review the 78-page document.

Phillips admonished lawyer Brent Romney for filing the pre-sentencing paperwork only a few days ago.

Outside court, Romney said he knew he filed late but wanted to give the judge the most up-to-date information about Pocklington's co-operation with authorities.

Pocklington pleaded guilty last May to a single perjury count for making false statements and oaths in his bankruptcy case.

A plea deal suggested that Pocklington serve probation and six months of home detention with electronic monitoring.

Jets stealthy, wealthy and unwise: Report

Report welcomed by Opposition Liberals say jet purchase is sole-source deal with a heavy price tag

The government's plan to buy 65 stealth fighter jets is a bad idea, an independent research agency concluded Thursday.

A report released by the Canadian Centre for Policy Alternatives says the multi-billion-dollar purchase isn't based on the country's real needs. Steven Staples of the Rideau Institute, who wrote the report, said the aircraft doesn't fit the roles Canada needs to address.

'Flying Cadillacs'

- The government wants the pricey new planes to replace the existing CF-18 fleet, which is approaching the end of its service life.
- The deal could cost as much as $16 billion, once a long-term maintenance contract is added in.

"This is a massive commitment of defence spending on 'flying Cadillacs' that is being driven by defence contractors, not by a clear-eyed view of Canada's defence needs," he said.

He suggested Canada abandon the idea of using air power overseas and extend the life of the existing F-18 fleet for North American surveillance.

▶ A doctor checks as people sleep Thursday during the first siesta championship in Madrid.

You snooze, you win in siesta-off

Contest to promote lunch-hour nap held by newly created National Association of Friends of the Siesta

Some held onto pillows or stuffed animals, others fought back giggles as they sought to take a siesta in public — all in the name of plugging a quintessential Spanish custom endangered by the demands of modern life.

Amid the bustle of a shopping mall, with babies wailing and pop music piped in overhead, clutches of people tried to snooze Thursday in what was billed as Spain's first siesta competition.

The goal — to promote Spain's cherished post-luncheon nap — is no joke, although the costumes of some who participated may be.

$1,400
Each sleeper gets only one shot, and the top prize of 1,000 euros ($1,400) goes to the person with the most points when the contest ends Oct. 23.

As the nine-day snooze Olympiad got underway, some competitors snuggled with giant stuffed animals or clutched pillows like babies with comforters. Others wore airplane eye masks to block the light.

A young stern-faced judge with a T-shirt bearing the letters "ZZZ" monitored the proceedings perched high on a lifeguard's chair.

Contestants in groups of five had 20 minutes to lie down on garish blue coaches and timed by a doctor with a pulse-measuring device to determine how long they spent snoozing.

They could win extra points for snoring, adopting goofy sleep positions or wearing outlandish night wear in plain view of shoppers. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ First-round champion Fermin Lominchar takes his award-winning nap.

Biggest snoozers

- The winner of the inaugural round was a construction worker, Fermin Lominchar, 47, who raised his arms in triumph as he mounted the podium. He was timed as having slept 18 minutes. "I just conked out. No problem whatsoever," he said, winning a 30-euro ($42.30) gift certificate.
- The prize for best attire went to Carmen Lopez Valdeon, a 49-year-old housewife, who donned pink pyjamas with violet daisies and fuzzy green socks. She finished second, with a sleeping time of 10 minutes, and used the pillow-hugging technique.
- In Round No. 2, as Sinead O'Connor boomed out Nothing Compares To You over the public sound system, 16-year-old Sandra Escribano giggled repeatedly as she tried but failed to fall asleep.

'People do not appreciate the value of rest'

Angel Rodriguez, a 57-year-old onlooker, said when he was young the siesta was so ingrained in Spanish culture that parents would force their children to take them.

"Now, people do not know how to savour the siesta anymore," he said, blaming jam-packed work schedules and trashy television shows. "They would rather watch than rest."

Dr. Lili Chuecas, who was hired to measure the contestants' sleep times, said these days fewer and fewer Spaniards have long lunch breaks — a crucial ingredient for a decent siesta — and have more hectic lifestyles in general.

"People do not appreciate the value of rest," said Chuecas.

Strike against French reforms intensifies

France's Senate pushes back a planned vote on the retirement reform bill until next Wednesday

French students intensified blockades of high schools and universities Thursday, as the third straight day of nationwide strikes over the government's retirement reform snarled train travel and sent worried drivers to the pumps ahead of possible fuel shortages.

While the protesting students won't reach retirement age for decades, the government is keeping a close eye on how their rallies play out. Students have brought down major government reforms in the past and student action has resulted in violence.

The country's main university and high school student unions called for nationwide protests Thursday, including one in front of France's largest employers' union, Medef.

The hope is to carry on the collective momentum of the movement against President Nicolas Sarkozy's push to raise the retirement age to 62 from 60. The students and labour unions see the pension reform as an attack on their well-deserved social protections.

Report due on image of Victoria police

A veteran officer has made 80 recommendations to help the police department in Victoria, B.C., shed its brawling image.

Retired Ottawa police chief Vince Bevan has completed his review of the department's use of force and its jailhouse operations.

His report will be released Friday morning in Victoria.

Bevan was appointed in mid-June following what Victoria Mayor and police board chairman Dean Fortin said were several "use of force" incidents involving members of the municipal force.

In one of those, Sgt. George Chong was charged following allegations a 33-year-old prisoner was assaulted while in custody at the jail.

Bevan has conducted similar reviews in Ontario and New Brunswick.

- U.S. military quietly put data online in July
- Iraqi government released higher count last October

A new U.S. military tally puts the death toll of Iraqi civilians and security forces in the bloodiest years of the war thousands below Iraqi government figures.

The little-noticed body count is the most extensive data on Iraqi war casualties ever released by the American military. It tallied deaths of almost 77,000 Iraqis between January 2004 and August 2008 — the darkest chapter of Iraq's sectarian warfare and the U.S. troop surge to quell it.

But the tally falls short of the estimated 85,694 deaths of civilians and security officials between January 2004 to Oct. 31, 2008, as counted last year by the Iraqi Human Rights Ministry.

Casualty figures in the U.S.-led war in Iraq have been hotly disputed because of the high political stakes in a conflict opposed by many countries and a large portion of the American public. Critics on each side of the divide accuse the other of manipulating the death toll to sway opinion.

"Even casualty rates are a political issue in Iraq," said Samer Muscati, a Middle East and North Africa researcher for New York-based Human Rights Watch.

Discrepancy

- In all, the U.S. data tallied 76,939 Iraqi security officials and civilians killed and 121,649 wounded between January 2004 and August 2008.
- The count shows 3,952 American and other U.S.-allied international troops were killed over the same period.
- The Iraqi Health Ministry said in its report released last October that 85,694 people were killed from the beginning of 2004 to Oct. 31, 2008, and that 147,195 were wounded.

No appeal for Bedard

- Supreme Court rejects Olympian's bid to overturn 2007 conviction
- Bedard won two gold medals in biathlon in 1994, bronze in 1992

The Supreme Court of Canada won't hear an appeal from Myriam Bedard.

The court has rejected her bid to overturn a 2007 conviction for violating a child-custody order.

The three-time Olympic medal winner was given a conditional discharge and two years probation for taking her daughter to the United States in violation of a custody agreement with her ex-husband.

Last March, the Quebec Court of Appeal dismissed her appeal, leaving the Supreme Court as her last resort. As usual in leave applications, the high court gave no reasons for rejecting the case.

Biomass project gets OK in Nova Scotia

25% The utility has argued that the biomass plant would help the province meet its goal to have 25 per cent of its energy supply come from renewable sources by 2015.

The Nova Scotia Utility and Review Board has approved a $208-million biomass project proposed by the province's power utility and the owners of a Port Hawkesbury paper mill.

The board says Newpage Port Hawkesbury and Nova Scotia Power can proceed with plans to burn waste wood for energy using a massive steam boiler at the Newpage mill, but it has applied several conditions.

The board says the utility won't be allowed to pass on any contract price increases to ratepayers. The board also said that should the project fail, any associated costs can't be passed on to consumers.

Execution near for Canadian?

Man convicted of fatally shooting two men while drunk and high

The fate of the only Canadian on death row in the United States is now in the balance after his final legal avenue of appeal was slammed shut by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The top court has declined to review the case of Ronald Smith of Red Deer, Alta., who was convicted in 1983 for the murder of two young Montana men.

"I'm always optimistic but also it was not unexpected," said Smith's longtime lawyer Greg Jackson.

Smith, now 52, originally requested the death penalty but changed his mind and has been fighting to stay alive ever since.

The case will now be sent to courts in Montana at which time a new execution date for Smith will be set.

"It depends how quickly it gets back from the U.S. Supreme Court. It should not take long," Jackson added.

Parity brings out creativity

Economists say loonie could hover near parity for a while U.S. dollar under pressure over signs the U.S. economy is going to remain weak

As the loonie flirts with parity for the second time this year, Canadians are becoming increasingly familiar with the effects of a higher dollar and are finding creative ways to take advantage of it.

With the Canadian dollar ascending on the strength of rising commodity prices, a recovering Canadian economy and weak U.S. greenback, Canadians are eying potential travel deals on vacations to the U.S. sunny southern states and Mexico.

Consumers are also doing more cross-border shopping and book buyers are increasingly ordering across the border on U.S. websites and picking up the books in the United States to save shipping costs and get the best deals possible.

"We get a lot of Canadians ordering from Amazon.com, and I asked them: 'Don't they have Amazon.ca?' But they said you either can't get the item or the price difference makes it worth it to drive down and pick it up."
TIM KROPP, WHO OWNS A UPS STORE IN LEWISTON, N.Y.

For business, corporate Canada is adjusting to the higher dollar, but "volatility is a killer," says a spokesman for the country's exporters and manufacturers, who are looking for new markets to offset Canada's historic dependence on the United States.

On financial markets, the Canadian dollar ended the day down 0.12 of a cent at 99.4 cents US Thursday, backing off a gain that briefly saw it pass parity with the greenback for the first time since April. Earlier in the morning it traded as high as 100.14 cents US.

Tim Kropp, who owns a UPS store in Lewiston, N.Y., bordering the Niagara region, said the vast majority of his customers are Canadians who have discovered they can get good deals by ordering goods online from American stores and having them shipped to an American post office box.

Book prices, which are determined at the time of publication, can appear out of date when compared to the value of the loonie, which fluctuates on a daily basis. This is why there can be such a big discrepancy between the U.S. and Canadian prices.

News in brief

OPEC leaves output targets unchanged

CRUDE OIL. OPEC oil ministers left production targets unchanged Thursday despite what they say is oversupply, signalling both satisfaction with crude oil prices in the $80-range and determination to send a message of stability to energy-dependent nations.

Thursday's agreement extended the overall output target of the 11 OPEC countries under quotas of just less than 25 million barrels of crude a day — a figure set in December 2008 when a series of cuts engineered a rebound in crude prices, which had collapsed to the low $30-range.

EXPORTS. Canada's merchandise trade picture brightened somewhat in August, largely as a result of an unsustainable spurt of exports of passenger cars to the United States.

That lifted exports to the U.S. by a sizable 2.7 per cent, roughly doubling this country's surplus with the United States to $2.9 billion from $1.5 billion in July.

TD Canada Trust starting Sunday service next year

TD Bank will be offering seven-day banking across the country at more than 300 of its TD Canada Trust bank locations as a response to customer demands for more flexible hours.

On Thursday, the bank announced longer branch hours and starting Feb. 13, more than 300 branches will be open seven days a week including from noon to 4 p.m. Sundays.

"Our promise to customers is comfortable banking, which means superior service and convenience — that's how we compete," said Kerry Peacock, executive vice-president, branch banking, TD Canada Trust, in a release.

"We already have the longest banking hours in the country, 50 per cent more than our competitors, and soon we'll have branches open to serve customers all week long, when it's convenient for them."

The announcement follows Wednesday's release of the Surviscor Online Banking scorecard that showed TD fell as the top-rated bank in terms of online customer support.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

DragonWave acquires Axerra Networks

DragonWave Inc. has acquired U.S.-based Axerra Networks Inc. for $9.5 million US in an effort to diversify the Canadian telecom equipment maker's customer base.

The acquisition will open up additional markets globally, including the United States where Axerra has a large cable company as a customer, DragonWave chief executive Peter Allen said Thursday.

"We're looking for strong growth from this," Allen said told financial analysts Thursday on a conference call.

"This acquisition represents a key step in our customer and portfolio diversification strategy," he said.

The Ottawa-based company is trying to reduce its reliance on U.S.-based carrier Clearwire for the bulk of its revenues. Clearwire is building a fourth-generation network designed to given a faster Internet experience at home, work or on the go and will cover 120 million people in major U.S. cities by the end of this year.

Allen didn't name the U.S.-based cable company, but signalled it's important for future growth.

"The confidence demonstrated by this customer gives us, in turn, the confidence we can work together to grow this business."

Axerra's product line includes network gateways and access devices that can bridge the technology gap between a carrier's new and legacy services such as voice calls.

DragonWave's microwave radio system equipment moves voice and data wirelessly between cell towers and networks and is compatible with emerging, faster networks designed to handle lots of data.

HISTORY'S GREATEST FRAUD?

Other people's money

DAVID DESCÔTEAUX

Imagine the scene. Unemployed for months, you must now hand over your house keys to the bank. Not one, but three different bank representatives knock on your door. Each of them has in hand a deed for your house. After verification, the three documents are ... fake! And no one knows who owns your house.

We thought we'd seen it all from Wall Street bankers. But foreclosure-gate might just set a new record for financial fraud — and plunge us all into a brand new crisis.

From 2004 to 2007, the big U.S. banks granted millions of dollars of mortgages. Even a cleaning lady earning $10 an hour could get a $500,000 shanty on credit. The banks were raking it in by regrouping mortgages and reselling them as financial products to investors, like pension plans. Now, when you're trading thousands of mortgages a day, it becomes costly and time-consuming to visit the notary for each one. The banks therefore created their own computer system (called MERS) to register the sales and purchases.

"Several banks seem to have decided to fabricate false documents."

Today, millions of Americans are losing their jobs and must hand over their house keys to banks. There's just one problem: The MERS registrations contain few details and are worthless in the eyes of several judges who authorize foreclosures. To reclaim the houses, banks must present notarized deeds. Unable to find the original documents — destroyed or lost — several banks seem to have decided to fabricate false documents. And had them authorized by lawyers without scruples (one of whom admitted to authorizing 10,000 in a single month). The result: A total mess from coast to coast. Several banks find themselves trying to repossess the same house, and homeowners are being evicted when they shouldn't be.

It gets worse. According to a growing number of analysts, if the banks created the MERS system, it wasn't to save a few cents. It was to resell on the sly — to investors like your pension plan — tons of fraudulent mortgages. Without sufficient documentation, the buyers of these products could not accurately verify their quality. We're talking about a major, countrywide fraud.

If the facts — which are still piling up daily — confirm this theory, the big banks will face a mountain of lawsuits. They will also lose their rights to thousands of homes. American financial expert Janet Tavakoli talks about a possible $700-billion bill. In other words: Bankruptcy for several big banks.

American taxpayers will never agree to bail out bankers yet again. Especially not in this context. Such incompetence, if coupled with criminal intent, deserves only one thing: That those banks be allowed to fail — in an orderly fashion — for once and for all. Which is what should have happened two years ago.

5 MINUTES WITH: ALEX MOSKALYK

With little more than a week to go before the election, George Smitherman's right-hand woman gives us candid access to the man who might be mayor.

Election time is closing in. What's the climate like at HQ?
It's buzzing. I would have to say that people have a new sense of energy because we're coming into the last week and everyone's giving it all they have. It's been a very long campaign and we're ready to hit it home. There's a lot of very positive energy.

What's the exact nature of your job?
George would call me his handcuffs in that I tend to make sure he's everywhere he needs to be on time, that he's got everything he needs, that he's staffed appropriately. I drive with him in the car, so I'm with him every day.

Most challenging part of your job?
I'm working with a politician who is extremely informed and knows every detail about everything, so the challenge for me is making sure that I'm up to par and that I've got the information he needs to do his job properly. It keeps you on your toes all the time.

George has been called a bully by media. What do you think of that accusation?
I think bullying is the wrong word. Every single time I see that I don't see that as the George that I know. The George I know demands a lot, but it motivates people like me. I've learned so much because of his enormous breadth of knowledge and you feel you've got to live up to that.

How many hours of sleep do you get a night?
There are definitely days when I get home, I'm in bed, and I'm still getting emails from George for the next morning. I think I get around six and he goes on about four or five. I've never seen anyone with more energy.

So, do you get any down time at all?
Not really. We have been working so hard and going so hard every day, by the time I get home I'm so exhausted I just pass out. Our down time is sometimes George and I will grab a tea and we'll sit in the car and have five minutes, and we'll crack a joke, have a laugh and go off to our next event. ● JORDANA DIVON

Protect children: Groups

Worth mentioning

Austria should stop detaining children and halt the deportations of well-integrated foreign families that are denied asylum, Amnesty International and three other groups urged Thursday.

The country also should better protect the rights of non-Austrian minors and become more lenient about allowing young asylum seekers and their parents to stay on humanitarian grounds, the organizations wrote in a letter to lawmakers.

The appeal comes just days after two eight-year-old twins were taken into custody with their father in an early morning raid and deported back to their native Kosovo. Their mother, who is in psychiatric care, stayed behind. The four had lived in Austria since 2004 but were expelled after being denied asylum and refusing to leave on their own.

The family's plight has sparked widespread debate and protest, with critics calling the deportations heartless and inhumane. Interior Minister Maria Fekter defended it, saying she was following the rule of law and the children were with their father. She has since softened her stance slightly, acknowledging Wednesday that pictures of the detention "greatly moved her."

▶ Getting to act alongside her friend Marc Jordan, left, helped convince Olivia Newton-John to take the role in Score: A Hockey Musical.

A legend returns to musicals after 30 years

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Although she sang with John Travolta in Grease, danced with Gene Kelly in Xanadu and recently featured her hit Let's Get Physical on Glee, Olivia Newton-John hasn't appeared in a full-on musical on the big screen for 30 years. That will change this weekend when she will be seen playing an overprotective hockey mom in Score: A Hockey Musical.

Director Michael McGowan wanted John, but didn't think he'd be able to get the Australian superstar, who now makes her home in Florida, to come north to shoot the film.

"She's funny and she doesn't take herself seriously," he said, "but for her to say, 'This is the film, a hockey musical shot in Toronto, in February, seemed virtually impossible."

When asked why chose to do this film she laughed and said, "Because it was fun. Marc Jordan (who plays her husband in the film) is my friend and he is married to Amy Sky, one of my best friends who also produces my music, so why not?"

Shooting in Toronto in frigid February temperatures, she says, was "an experience," but the working with the cast and crew made it worthwhile. "My memory of the movie was having fun," she adds.

Working with her friend Jordan, who is best known as a solo singer-songwriter (he wrote the hit Rhythm of My Heart for Rod Stewart), caused to her to occasionally get the giggles so badly she could barely contain herself.

"I was really embarrassed in the end because you can break up a couple of times but you have to know when to stop, but Marc was just so hysterical."

Ditto her director. "He is marvelous," she says. "He has such a quirky sense of humour which fits in with mine really well. On the set he was very relaxed; he's worked with everyone before so it was a real family atmosphere. There was no stress, there was no, 'Oh he's yelling at you.'"

She saves her highest praise, however, for her young co-stars, Noah Reid and Allie MacDonald who play her son and his best friend. When asked if she passed along any tips to the neophytes she said,

"They are both really gifted. I probably should have asked them for hints rather than the other way around."

"It's a lot of good fun, but the peace message is good I think. I'm not one for violence and was brought up in the same kind of family as (the character of home-schooled-pacifist-hockey-prodigy-Farley Gordon). Maybe not quite as stringent but my father was a professor and parents were academic and peace was a big thing for my mother. It wasn't important to win, it was important to play fair, so (Score: A Hockey Musical) kind of rung true for me. I

NORTON'S IMPRESSIVE CRIMINAL RESUMÉ

In Focus

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Edward Norton has made a career of playing jailbirds on screen. His edgy intensity lights up movies like this weekend's Stone, despite one writer calling him "the passport definition of no distinguishing marks." The Yale graduate's slight, gawky frame is not exactly what you have in mind when you think criminal and yet his portrayals of people on life's fringe's have earned him Oscar nominations and come to define his career.

In his first big screen part Norton played the dual role of altar boy Aaron and his alter ego, the psychotic Roy in the film Primal Fear. Accused of murder, he is zealously defended by a defense attorney (Richard Gere) who is drawn to the sweet Southern boy until he realizes that Aaron is totally insane. A complete unknown when he auditioned for the role, he tricked the film's director into thinking he shared an eastern Kentucky background with Aaron by speaking with a twang — which he picked by watching Coal Miner's Daughter.

▶ Edward Norton plays an arsonist looking to get out on parole in Stone which opens on Friday.

"The most I had to offer was anonymity," he later said. "The potency of the revelation about who my character really was in that film was in part reliant on the fact that people had absolutely no prior knowledge of me."

Next time behind bars he pulled a De Niro, and in American History X physically transformed to play the role of a white supremacist sent away for murder. In jail he learns the error of his ways and works to help his brother from going down the same, wrong-headed path. "I knew this guy was going to have to be really physically fearsome," he says, "and that's not something anyone would peg me for. [He's] defined by rage and this body he's created is the physical manifestation of that."

In this weekend's Stone he stars as an arsonist who will do anything, including using his wife as bait, to earn parole. Despite having played convicts in the past, Norton was keen to bring an extra layer of realism to this role so he met with actual prisoners to learn how they spoke.

"Their language is fantastic. At one point, one of these guys was telling me about a fight and how he had to just let it happen and not fight. (He said,) 'When you're short time, you have to be a vegetarian.' I said, 'What?' He said, 'Vegetarian, you can't have beef with nobody.'"

When does a gore become a crime?

Montreal special-effects artist arrested after complaints of gruesome content on his website

It was like a scene from a Wes Craven movie Wednesday outside the Montreal courthouse.

There were about 20 demonstrators, dressed as ghouls and zombies, around the building to protest criminal charges being laid against a maker of gory films.

Remy Couture requested a jury trial and pleaded not guilty to charges of moral corruption and distributing obscene material, laid under Section 163 of the Criminal Code.

Police say they arrested Couture after international complaints about the extremely gruesome and realistic-looking violence on his website. That site, innerdepravity.com, is temporarily shut down.

But Couture calls the case a disgrace.

"I believe it's a waste of time. A waste of time for me, and for society," he said Wednesday.

"It's a waste of money, too. Because I'm not a criminal. I have no record. I'm a special-effects artist.

"I find this a bit of an embarrassment for Quebec, that this time wouldn't be spent on real cases. But they're going ahead."

He said his only crime is using fake blood, latex and silicone to help tell disturbing stories.

He has in the past scoffed at attempts to draw a link between gory films and real-life violence; he has noted that millions of people watch those movies without becoming killers, while a simple Beatles song (Helter Skelter) was cited as an inspiration for the Manson family murders.

Couture's case has drawn thousands of supporters to an online petition and to his own personal website.

Movie review See it twice ●●●●● | See it now ●●●● | Worth watching ●●● | Yawn ●● | Don't bother ●

Red's great cast brings plenty of fun

Red
Genre: Action/Comedy
Director: Robert Schwentke
Stars: Bruce Willis, Morgan Freeman, John Malkovich, Helen Mirren, Morgan Freeman

There's a moment in the first half of Red, Bruce Willis' delightful new shoot-em-up, when the chaos on screen reaches a fevered, frenzied high point as retired CIA agents Frank (Willis) and loose cannon Marvin (John Malkovich) dance their way through a fire fight in a Louisiana shipyard, ending with a ludicrous showdown involving a rocket launcher. It's 100 per cent pure fun. Unfortunately, the movie can't keep up the frenetic pace after that and soon has to stop and catch its breath, as if the film itself were one of the retirees it features.

Whatever points Red loses for slowing its pace, it more than makes up for the with the introduction of perhaps its biggest selling point: Dame Helen Mirren with an assault rifle. As a former British agent now taken to gardening, Mirren is obviously enjoying herself here, as is the rest of the cast. And despite the fact that Willis and Mary-Louise Parker are the focus, Mirren's relationship with an ex-KGB agent (Brian Cox) is the real heart of the movie.

The only problem with Red, really, is that Willis, at 55, just doesn't look like an old man, which is probably exactly what the actor wants you to think.

NED EHRBAR

Nowhere Boy
Genre: Drama
Director: Sam Taylor-Wood
Stars: Aaron Johnson, Kristin Scott Thomas, Anne-Marie Duff
●●●½

Sam Taylor-Wood's impressive debut about the early life of John Lennon focuses more on Lennon's painful adolescent relationships with his overbearing aunt and estranged mother than his burgeoning musical collaboration with Paul McCartney. The performances are extraordinary and carry the film, particularly Aaron Johnson who gradually transforms from an awkward teen into the icon.

PHIL BROWN

Hereafter
Genre: Drama
Director: Clint Eastwood
Stars: Matt Damon, Bryce Dallas Howard, Cecile de France
●●●

Eastwood's Hereafter opens big as a tsunami flattens a tropical city. A vacationing French news anchor (de France) drowns but is later revived. A reluctant San Francisco psychic (Damon) believes his connection with the dead has ruined his life, and a boy in London suffers unbearable pain when his twin dies. Their quests to know the afterlife unite them in Eastwood's mesmerising but often slow supernatural meditation.

ANNE BRODIE

Stone
Genre: Drama
Director: John Curran
Stars: Robert De Niro, Edward Norton, Mila Jovovich
●●●

Stone is a muddled, but intriguing prison drama about a burned out corrections officer, a manipulative con with a conscience, and his femme fatale-esque wife desperate to get a release. This movie should have been a smart dirty thriller, but is teased out into an almost theological think piece by director John Curran. The approach works wonders for the cast, with DeNiro giving a thoughtful if somewhat lazy performance.

Amusing without 3-D

Jackass 3D
Genre: Comedy
Director: Jeff Tremaine
Stars: Johnny Knoxville, Bam Margera, Steve-O
●●½

Three-D would seem tailor-made for the guys from Jackass.

When the technology is used for its funniest and most entertaining purposes, as it was recently in Piranha 3-D," it's all about the wild, gratuitous gimmicks. I don't need to be immersed in Pandora; I want stuff flung at me from the screen.

Johnny Knoxville and Co., who are constantly outdoing themselves with crazy and creative pranks and stunts, would seem to be just the right guys to do that sort of thing. But very little occurs in their latest movie, Jackass 3D, that wouldn't have sufficed in 2-D.

Sure, there's an amusing and effective bit involving archery with a sex toy rather than an arrow. Steve-O and Dave

England play tetherball with a beehive — dressed in nothing but furry bear hats and tighty-whities — and it feels as if the worked-up insects are swarming around us, too. Weiner baseball, which is exactly what it sounds like, is good for a laugh because it's presented in artful slow motion (and man, is there a lot of penis in this movie).

But more often than not, this third installment in the franchise, directed as always by Jeff Tremaine, doesn't take full advantage of its visual potential. A Jet-Ski stunt Knoxville performs in a swimming pool, which is featured prominently in the trailers, is a bit of a let down, for example.

Jackass 3D — and the group's entire oeuvre, if you will - is at its best when it's about these guys playing well-orchestrated tricks on each other and the world at large. Getting reactions out of strangers always works: In the most effective example, Knoxville — wearing old-man makeup that makes him look like Ted Turner — makes out in public with a much younger girl who's supposed to be his 19-year-old granddaughter.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Conviction
Genre: Drama
Director: Tony Goldwyn
Stars: Hilary Swank, Sam Rockwell
●●½

You cannot deny that Conviction is a compelling tale. Based on the true story of Betty Anne Waters, a Massachusetts woman who believed so strongly her incarcerated brother was innocent of murder, she became a lawyer with the sole purpose of freeing the sibling. That's pretty impressive. Beyond their performances though, Conviction rarely rises above the level of an impressive Law & Order episode.

STEVE GOW

I Spit On Your Grave
Genre: Horror
Director: Steven R. Monroe
Stars: Sarah Butler, Daniel Franzese, Andrew Howard
●

The original I Spit On Your Grave was hardly a masterpiece, but at least director Meir Zarchi had a point behind his exploitation. The remake attempts to show the horrors of rape and bittersweet futility of revenge with a script so clumsily written that it's impossible to take seriously even for a second. The film exists purely for shock value and its thrills are empty, lacking any sense of horror movie fun.

PHIL BROWN

Tales From The Golden Age
Genre: Comedy
Director: Cristian Mungiu and others
Stars: Vlad Ivanov, Tania Popa
●●●½

The Nicolae Ceauşescu-era in Romania's history is a dark one and Cristian Mungiu aims to prove it — but not all alone. The award-winning filmmaker enlisted four other directors to each tell a quirky urban tale from the era about living under the suppressive regime. At over two hours, it gets tiring but such absurd stories as a policeman trying to quietly gas a pig in his tiny apartment is pure entertainment.

Carlos gets epic treatment

Story of infamous terrorist took a great deal of research Director used many real-life locations

ADAM NAYMAN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

"The good thing about long films is that there's a lot to talk about," says Olivier Assayas of his five-hour thriller Carlos, which makes its Canadian premiere at TIFF Bell Lightbox.

The film, which tells the true story of the notorious Venezuelan-born terrorist Ilich Ramirez Sanchez — aka Carlos the Jackal — is notable not only for its epic length, but for the fact that Assayas shot in as many of the real-life locations as possible.

"Usually, any Western film (set in) the Middle East will be shot in Morocco," says the director. "Because this was a French production, I could go places Hollywood couldn't, like Lebanon or Syria."

Assayas says that Carlos is the most meticulously researched film of his career to date.

"It's a very thin line between getting things right and getting them wrong," he says. "You have a responsibility to an audience that's going to believe that what you say is true, so you have to try to be obsessively accurate."

The film's immaculate period textures and smartly curated pop soundtrack do a lot to cement the sense of time and place.

"To me, it's not a period piece," says Assayas. "I lived through those times, so for me it is part of my life, which means it is part of the present."

The most contemporary aspect of Carlos is the way it analyzes its protagonist's striving for celebrity: in a profession that prizes stealth, Ramirez's desire to sculpt himself into an iconic figure sticks out.

"The fact that Carlos was a terrorist who was also media-conscious makes him quite unique," admits Assayas, "but it was also his undoing. "It's the reason he's in jail now. His colleagues were creatures of the shadows, and now, they are walking free."

▶ Olivier Assayas, director of Carlos, did a great deal of research for the film

Long movies

Carlos checks in at around 5½ hours (there is a also shorter 2½ hours version for some theatrical releases). Surprisingly there are plenty of movies in the same company length-wise as Carlos. Here is a partial list of are some other movies that crossed to the five-hour mark.

- Cleopatra (1963): 330 minutes
- Little Dorrit (1988): 360 mins.
- The Best of Youth (2003): 400 mins.
- Sátántangó (1994): 450 mins.
- War and Peace (1968): 484 mins.
- Shoah (1985): 566 mins.
- Evolution of a Filipino Family (2004): 647 mins.
- How Yukong Moved the Mountains (1976): 763 mins.
- Out 1 (1971): 773 mins.

No big Oscar date change

The 2012 Oscars will not be weeks earlier than usual, as had been speculated — a move that would have upended Hollywood's crowded awards season.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences said late Wednesday that its Board of Governors had determined the date of the 84th Academy Awards "will not be significantly earlier than the now-traditional last Sunday in February."

6 Best Eastwood flicks

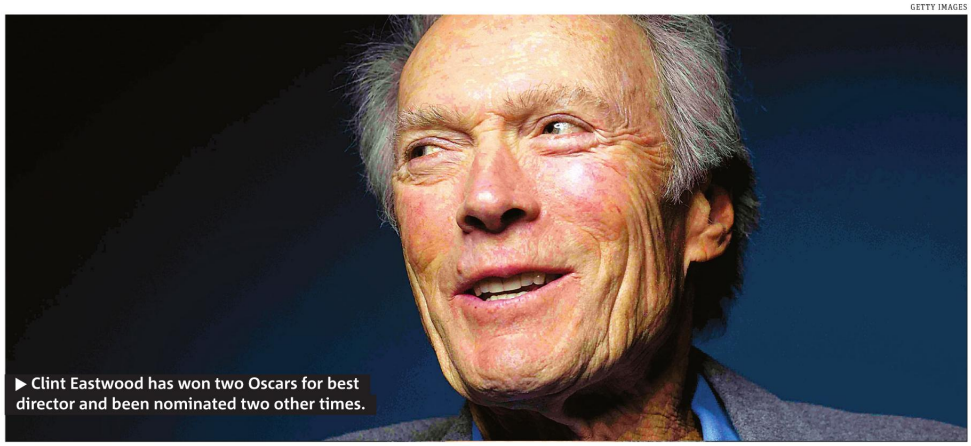
We've let Clint Eastwood take over this week because ... well, because he's Clint Eastwood. What are you gonna do, say no to the man?

Actually, Eastwood was kind enough to take a few moments to select his five favourite movies from the dozens he's directed; his latest, Hereafter, opens this weekend.

But because we're feeling so charitable, we let him pick six, listed below alphabetically along with his comments and insights.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Clint Eastwood has won two Oscars for best director and been nominated two other times.

BIRD
1988

▶ Eastwood's biopic on jazz legend Charlie Parker: "It was a nice story about someone whose musicianship I admired so greatly. It was a good script on the analysis of the self-destructiveness of personality: people who insist on sinking into the abyss. Success, being idolized by other musicians — none of it was enough."

LETTERS FROM IWO JIMA
2006

▶ One of two Second World War films Eastwood released in 2006: "I was proud of Letters from Iwo Jima. I got the idea of doing it while doing Flags of Our Fathers, which is about the American invasion of the island. But the film pointed out what it must have been like to have been one of the defenders of the island — to have been there, and been told not to plan on returning home. What a difficult request to make of people. Also, the Japanese soldiers were facing certain annihilation. They never gave up hope. A lot of them would have loved to have been out of the war and home, just like soldiers from any nation."

MILLION DOLLAR BABY
2004

▶ Starring Hilary Swank as a boxer and Eastwood as her reluctant trainer: "It appealed to me because it was a story regarding family — a search for the daughter he never had a relationship with, and the search for the father that was no longer there for her. They were both sort of reticent, and ended up putting themselves through the most emotional test possible, ending with her desire to be euthanized."

MYSTIC RIVER
2003

▶ About childhood friends reunited by tragedy in an insular part of Boston: "I liked the book and the screenplay by Brian Helgeland. The way sometimes fate deals a bad hand, and it just keeps getting worse and worse, and there is nothing anyone can do. No amount of sane advice can stop the train."

THE OUTLAW JOSEY WALES
1976

▶ Starring Eastwood as a Missouri farmer out for revenge after the Civil War: "It was the first Western I had done in some time since the 1960s Leone movies. It came out in the '70s when the country was restless about Vietnam. It addressed the divisiveness of war, and how it can tear at heart and soul. But it also dealt with the rejuvenation of a cynic, re-instilling his life with purpose, and with a surrogate family."

UNFORGIVEN
1992

▶ Eastwood as a retired gunslinger taking on one last job: "I loved the Unforgiven script. You had to get a ways into it before you knew who was the protagonist and who was the antagonist. Even the villains, with the exceptions of the renegade cowboys, had good points to their character, and had dreams. Little Bill (played by Gene Hackman) just wanted a peaceful life. He believed he was doing the right thing. The film dealt with issues — gun control, and the struggles people have "within." The hero went against instinct. It was a very rich story, involving loyalty to friends, family and rationalizing deeds. It was a very intelligent script."

▶ Character Mark Dexler, left, reaches for romance in Teletoon's The Dating Guy

Dating gets animated

pick-up lines, date prep and the perfect woman

The Dating Guy, Teletoon's new series about dating, sex and friendship is about to shake-up Sunday nights. The animated series follows the adventures of four friends — Mark, Woody, Sam and VJ — on their weekly search for love.

Metro recently caught up with Mark Dexler, a character on the show voiced by Canadian actor Fabrizio Filippo, to find out how this man's hunt for "the one" is going.

You are searching for "the one." What qualities are you looking for in a woman?

The perfect woman to me is someone who is intelligent and independent and passionate about making the world a better place. But has to have really nice boobs.

What are some of your best pick up lines?

Imagine we're in a dance club I approach a lady...
Me: You wanna dance?!
Her: Not with you!
Me: I'm sorry, you misunderstood me! I said you look fat in those pants!

You're a pretty metrosexual guy. What are your grooming and wardrobe advice to other guys?

Don't forget to wash behind your ears. A lot of guys forget that.

Why do you think you've been unlucky in love so far?

See question number one.

Tell me about some of your most memorable dates.

I can't remember any of the memorable ones.

METRO

Along with some very talented Canadian voice actors, The Dating Guy will feature guests such as Russell Peters and Howie Mandel.

TV picks

Blue Bloods band together

POLICE. The cast of the promising new drama Blue Bloods is thrown into a dire situation as the entire NYPD bands together when an off-duty cop is murdered during a diamond heist. (Friday, CTV, CBS)

Redemption for Naomi?

DRAMA. The glamorous girls of 90210 finally get together in Firday's episode to help prove that Mr. Cannon did, in fact, rape Naomi. Meanwhile, Dixon pushes Ivy away because he fears for his life. (Friday, Global)

Balls or pucks, which to pick?

SPORTS. Sports fans will certainly have a difficult choice to make this weekend. The CBC has two all-Canadian NHL matchups as Ottawa faces off against Montreal and Edmonton takes on Calgary. Meanwhile, baseball's National League Championship Series kicks off. Which battle will come first on your TV screen? (Saturday, Fox, Sportsnet)

The Simpsons get spooky

ANIMATED. Gear up for Hallowe'en with two classic instalments of The Simpsons and its annual Treehouse of Horror spookfest. From the venerable cartoon's fifth and sixth seasons, these episodes' vignettes include spoofs of Dracula and The Shining and a guest appearance from James Earl Jones. (Saturday, Comedy)

Vixen Vanessa on Housewives

COMEDY. Vanessa Williams continues to stir the pot on Desperate Housewives. In Sunday's episode, her character tries to steal Keith away from Bree while Susan is horrified when the Internet company she's been working for splashes her image across billboard advertisements. (Sunday, CTV, ABC)

Mad Men faces fragile future

Abdul's dance crew announced

CBS has announced the host and judges for Paula Abdul's new talent competition series, Live to Dance.

The network said Wednesday that choreographer Travis Payne, who worked on Michael Jackson's This Is It, and former Pussycat Dolls singer-dancer Kimberly Wyatt will join Abdul as the show's trio of experts.

The host of Live to Dance will be Andrew Gunsberg. He previously served as co-host of Australian Idol and host of the syndicated countdown show, Take 40 Australia.

Abdul is an executive producer of Live to Dance. She served as a judge on American Idol until leaving the Fox talent show last year.

Live to Dance will premiere on CBS this coming January.

Lima to don $2M of lingerie

Katy Perry, Akon and model Adriana Lima in a $2-million fantasy bra are among the highlights planned for this year's Victoria's Secret fashion show.

The hugely popular lingerie show has become a holiday tradition of sorts, with many of the catwalkers outfitted in fanciful wings — and very little else — parading in front of elaborate sets.

ADVANCING GENERICS

Is (Bleep) off

- Ratings imply trouble for Twitter-to-TV sitcom
- Creator Halpern assures viral transition will work

Justin Halpern knows that not everyone is supportive of a guy fortunate enough to turn a Twitter feed into a bestselling book and a prime-time network sitcom.

His good luck instantly breeds hostility, he says, "and it's kind of a justified feeling because it's just a Twitter page."

Hits on the Web haven't typically transferred well to TV (see quarterlife), but Halpern might be an exception.

His Twitter feed, S— My Dad Says, amassed a huge following (now more than 1.7 million followers) simply by quotes he relayed from his 74-year-old father, Sam Halpern, a classic curmudgeon with a penchant for expletives.

His similarly titled book debuted on The New York Times list of bestsellers. Then, the CBS sitcom starring William Shatner as Halpern's father premiered to 12.5 million viewers, more than twice that of 30 Rock.

Ratings for (Bleep) My Dad Says (the Twitter feed's title was changed for the CBS show) have since declined each week and reviews have been bad. But the show hopes it has cast off its novelty label and become one of the few Internet-to-TV success stories.

"On the internet, when you present something that's really genuine and real, it always has a better shot than when you present something premeditated and scripted. On television ... it's a different kind of audience"

JUSTIN HALPERN

It hasn't been a smooth ride. The pilot, produced by Warner Bros., had to be reshot, and the part of the son was recast with Jonathan Sadowski.

The changes may have improved things, but critics were still unimpressed. The New York Times, for one, called it "a bad idea from the moment it was announced" and "a wholly generic sitcom so divorced from its source material that you have to pinch yourself."

The show is oddly old-school in its reliance on sitcom tradition. But to a certain extent, the Twitter feed that started it all was classically sitcomish: There's no more familiar TV trope than the crabby father.

One of the ingredients that set Halpern's Twitter feed apart was its vulgarity. His father's musings and advice are harsh. One of few examples without an offensive word: "Pressure? Get married when you want. Your wedding's just one more day in my life I can't wear sweat pants."

Halpern ended up living with his parents in San Diego after he got a job with Maxim.com and his girlfriend unexpectedly dumped him. In the book, he fleshes out the details of his life and his relationship with his dad, whom he describes as "the least passive-aggressive human being on the planet."

He started the Twitter account as a lark at the suggestion of a friend.

"I had no idea what to expect," he says. "It was just funny to tell my friends, 'Look at all these people that follow what my dad says.'"

Executive producers David Kohan and Max Mutchnick, creators of Will & Grace, were brought in to run the show. Halpern is a co-executive producer and writer.

The most notable change in the adaptation was sanitizing the vulgarity. The character based on Halpern, too, was turned from merely a bemused onlooker into a son craving love and sympathy from his father.

SUICIDAL MAN SAVED AFTER T.I. APPEARANCE

GETTY IMAGES

Police got unexpected help talking a suicidal man down from an Atlanta skyscraper on Wednesday when rapper T.I. showed up.

Officer James Polite says the hip-hop star joined the crowd outside the 22-story office building in midtown Wednesday and told officers he wanted to help. Police said the man agreed to come down in exchange for a few minutes face-to-face with T.I.

"I told him it ain't that bad. It'll get better, to put the time and effort into making it better," T.I. said. "I just reminded him know that I know. It looks bad right now, but it can turn around."

T.I. said he heard about the situation on the radio and drove to the building to help. He recorded a video of himself on a cellphone and rescue workers took it to the man to prove the rapper was really there.

The good deed follows recent legal trouble for the rapper, who is due in court Friday for a parole hearing after being arrested on suspicion of drug offences last month in Los Angeles.

He's on supervised release after spending a year in prison on federal weapons charges.

Country roots run deep for Hootie frontman

Darius Rucker's album Charleston, SC 1966, debuts this week While Hootie and the Blowfish marks its 25th anniversary, with more albums to come

Darius Rucker has spent the last few years reinventing himself as a country star. He's had a platinum debut, No. 1 hits and his follow-up, Charleston, SC 1966, debuted this week.

Rucker hasn't forgotten what made him one of music's most bankable voices, though.

Hootie & the Blowfish celebrates its 25th anniversary this year.

Rucker said the band never really broke up — though they haven't recorded together since releasing Looking For Lucky in 2005.

They play together occasionally, including four dates this year, and bandmates see each other often. Rucker says the chemistry that helped them sell more than 25 million records remains strong.

"We could get together right now and have an album for you in three months," Rucker said. "We're all writing all the time. I was sitting down writing songs (recently) and I wrote a country song and then a song came out that sounded like Hootie, so I saved it for that."

Rucker's solo country turn has turned in to quite a run. His first country album, 2008's Learn To Live spawned three No. 1 songs, sold about 1.5 million copies and earned him a Country Music Association Award for best new artist.

Rucker's second act as a country music star is no surprise to Hootie guitarist Mark Bryan. He's been listening to his friend belt out country tunes since they met in 1985 when Bryan heard Rucker singing in the shower of their University of South Carolina dorm hall.

"The very first show Darius and I did together at Pappy's with an acoustic guitar, we did Family Tradition by Hank Williams Jr., which he's still doing in his solo country set," Bryan said.

After a few months, Rucker and Bryan decided to go for it and enlisted bassist Dean Felber and a drummer. Felber, who had played in a band with Bryan during high school, didn't really want to join but he said he'd fill in till they could find a permanent bassist.

"And it's amazing 25 years after asking Dean to play with us, we're still looking for a bass player and we're still in a band. That's pretty awesome," Rucker said.

Friends will celebrate Hootie & The Blowfish's 25th anniversary with a concert and art installation unveiling in Columbia on Thursday. It will be a cherished memory for Rucker, who admits many of his memories from the Hootie years are a "blur."

"We had just taken college and extended it a few years," he said. "Our tour was a travelling party every day. Every day, all day. I look back and I laugh, people will ask me things and they'll say things, and I'll say, 'I don't remember that.'"

Jonas bros cancel concert in Mexico

Disney stars the Jonas Brothers have cancelled a concert scheduled in the Mexican city of Monterrey because of security concerns.

Concert promoter Live Nation says the Oct. 21 concert was cancelled due to "a series of unfortunate events" in Monterrey and out of concern for fans.

Monterrey is Mexico's richest city and one of its safest, but a wave of drug violence has shocked residents. More than 400 people have been killed this year in the state of Nuevo Leon, where Monterrey is located.

Jonas Brothers fan Dharyus Ledezma begged the trio on their Facebook page to announce a new concert date soon. The Monterrey resident said she had been looking forward to seeing them since the show was announced five months ago.

WHAT CARS WILL SOON SOUND LIKE

Sound Check

ALAN CROSS
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

The first time anyone offered drivers a chance to customize their musical experience beyond the radio was Chrysler. In the 1950s, they, for a brief time, offered an under-dash turntable. It didn't go over so well with the motoring public.

Since then, the standard AM radio grew to include FM, 8-tracks, cassettes, CDs and six- and 10-pack changers and satellite radio with many featuring displays that looked like they were designed by a Las Vegas casino. Mono became stereo. Four speakers became six, then eight, then 12 then … well, you know.

But all this is nothing compared to the revolution in automobile entertainment systems that's just starting to hit.

Consider this: Up to 25 per cent of smart phone/MP3 users already connect their devices to their car speakers. Given how awkward this process can be (FM transmitters, ugly cable connections), this is astounding. One in four!

When it comes to factory equipment, Ford has the early lead with their excellent powered-by-Microsoft Sync system. Want to know how Ford has managed to move so many vehicles in the last couple of quarters? Look no further than the audio systems they're offering in selected models. They've also just announced their AppLink system which will allow smart phone developers to seamlessly link their apps with Sync. It will be ridiculously easy to stream, say, Internet radio, from your smart phone through your Ford, complete with all sort of nifty hands-free voice commands. Ford says they've had more than a thousand proposals so far.

"It will be ridiculously easy to stream, say, Internet radio, from your smart phone through your Ford, complete with all sort of nifty hands-free voice commands."

Selected Audi vehicles offer always-on Internet through a 3G connection. That means you can be rolling down any road at any speed and be continuously connected to the Internet. What's more is that the Audi system creates a local Wi-Fi network within the car so that the kids can surf the web from their smart phones, iPads or laptops in the back seat.

GM, Volkswagen, Kia and a growing number of manufacturers are working on similar systems. Pandora has a deal with GM to get their streaming service into your next Chevy Malibu (but not in Canada, don't get me started on why not). Meanwhile, after market manufactures like Audiovox are touting car radio units that will stream tens of thousands of Internet radio stations.

This ain't your grandfather's AM radio. And it's way better than playing records in the car.

Perry, Hilson, Sugarland to perform on VH1 Divas Salute The Troops

CHARLES SYKES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Being a diva is different than it used to be.

Katy Perry, Sugarland, Keri Hilson, Nicki Minaj and Paramore are this year's VH1 Divas, but they'll be taking some of the focus off themselves, singing for the military through a partnership with the USO.

Perry, Sugarland, Hilson and Minaj will perform for thousands of men and women in uniform at Marine Corps Air Station Miramar in San Diego. Paramore will visit Marines, soldiers, airmen, sailors, coastguardsmen and reservists at a military base in the Middle East.

Hilson called it an incredible opportunity.

"I get to be among so many other influential women, groundbreaking women, strong, powerful, confident women, not only on that day, but just to be a part of the legacy of VH1 Divas," she said.

Hilson said she embraces the positive characteristics of being a diva.

"Strong woman, yes I am. Leader, yes I am. Innovative, creative, all those things, yes, I am that," said Hilson.

Jennifer Nettles of Sugarland has a similar definition for the modern day diva.

"All of these women definitely have a larger than life persona, be it on stage or who they are or what they wear," she said. "I think there's something to be said for celebrating that."

Hilson and Nettles love the idea of supporting the troops through the show.

Hilson's dad served in the Army before she was born, and Nettles has a brother in the Air Force.

Sugarland is the only country act on the bill, and Nettles is excited to show people "that country music is hip and young and fun and accessible."

She says, "It's not necessarily about lifestyle, it's about having fun and being human."

To make her Divas performance memorable, Nettles jokes that she's "hoping to get to wear the Cher outfit," from the infamous 1989 music video aboard a battleship for If I Could Turn Back Time. Cher, a previous VH1 Divas performer, wore a barely there, V-shaped swimsuit with a fishnet body stocking during the video, which was taped with a large group of sailors.

VH1 Divas Salute The Troops premieres Dec. 5.

He's two decades past the age when most Americans begin receiving Social Security benefits.

And the Hot Kid's never been hotter.

Elmore Leonard's 44th novel, Djibouti, hit shelves on Tuesday, a day after he celebrated his 85th birthday. And Justified, the FX drama based on a Leonard short story and for which he's an executive producer, wrapped up a critically acclaimed first season earlier this year.

Surely, the octogenarian is ready to slow down a bit.

"Nooooo," Leonard says when the dreaded "r" word is uttered: retirement.

"There's no reason to. This is the most enjoyable thing I do," he said during an interview at his home in suburban Detroit. "I've been doing it for nearly 60 years."

The numbers over that time are staggering.

Besides 44 novels, Leonard has written 32 Western short stories and nine produced screenplays. Seventeen of his books have earned a place on The New York Times list of best-sellers, and he's had his work turned into 21 feature films, seven TV movies and three series, the latest of which is Justified.

That show is at the forefront of Leonard's thoughts these days. He's writing again about U.S. Marshal Raylan Givens, a recurring Leonard character who is the centerpiece of Justified.

"I have written him in two books before and he can carry a book," he says. "There's no question about that. But to get him into situations that would work for Justified, then I'm doing a little bit more than writing a book. I think they will use quite a bit of it."

Leonard's latest, Djibouti, follows an award-winning documentary filmmaker who heads to the Horn of Africa to chronicle the activities of Somali pirates. In true Leonard fashion, each character has motivations that aren't always immediately clear and often lead them to operate on the other side of the law.

Leonard says it's his favourite book so far.

But, he says, laughing, "the one I always just finish is always my favourite."

Adam Lambert keeps promise

Glam rocker Adam Lambert kept his promise to Malaysia's government, steering clear of sexually provocative moves at a concert protested by Islamic activists Thursday.

The openly gay American Idol runner-up thrilled thousands of fans with his impeccable vocals and humorous showmanship for more than an hour at a stadium in Kuala Lumpur, the largest city in Muslim-majority Malaysia.

But outside the stadium Thursday night, dozens of members of the Pan-Malaysian Islamic Party, the nation's biggest opposition group, waved banners that read, "Muslim students protest gay icon in our country" and "Not our culture" with pictures of Lambert kissing another man.

The demonstration did not disrupt the show, which Lambert had pledged earlier this week to tone down slightly in accordance to Malaysian government guidelines.

Footage of Lambert locking lips with a male musician at many of his shows are widely available on the Internet. But in Malaysia, the only kiss the audience saw was one that Lambert blew to them in between songs.

"Ladies and gentlemen, tonight's show is about love," Lambert said, midway through energetic performances of his U.S. Top 10 hit Whataya Want From Me, If I Had You and For Your Entertainment.

"I think some people have a problem with me kissing a guy on stage," Lambert, 28, told reporters hours before the concert. "But you know, as much as I hate to compromise any time, it's more important for me to bring to the people of Malaysia my show."

Several Malaysian government officials were at the stadium to monitor Lambert's performance.

▶ If you're having some guests over try this Baked Mushroom Topped Brie. And if you're staying in, try this Mushroom, Chicken and Leek Pot Pie.

Have fun with fungi

Prepare and chill the mushroom and brie topping to have on hand for spur of the moment entertaining. Baking and serving on oven-proof platter keeps the cheese warm while eating. For a full — and fast — meal, check out our mushroom pot pie recipe as well:

Ingredients:

Baked Mushroom Topped Brie

- ½ lb (250 g) fresh sliced mushrooms (white or crimini)
- ½ cup (125 ml) coarsely chopped onions
- ¼ cup (50 ml) finely chopped walnuts
- 1 large clove garlic, sliced
- ½ tsp (2 ml) each dried thyme, rosemary and pepper
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) olive oil
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) balsamic vinegar
- 1 (200g) wheel cold Brie cheese
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) finely minced fresh parsley or chives (optional)

Mushroom, Chicken and Leek Pot Pie

- 1 lb (500 g) boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) vegetable oil, divided
- 2 large leeks, white part only, sliced
- 1 lb (500g) sliced fresh mushrooms
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) dried tarragon
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) all purpose flour
- 3/4 cup (175 ml) chicken stock
- ½ tsp (2 ml) salt
- ¼ tsp (1 ml) pepper
- 1 9"/22cm deep dish frozen pie shell, thawed

Baked Mushroom Topped Brie

Preparation:

1. Finely chop mushrooms, onions, walnuts and garlic, thyme, rosemary and pepper in food processor.
2. Heat oil in large skillet over medium heat; cook and stir mushroom mixture for 5-7 minutes or until all liquid has evaporated. Stir in vinegar and cook 1-2 minutes. Remove from heat and cool to room temperature; cover and chill.
3. At serving time slice the wheel of Brie in half horizontally and place cut side up on oven-proof serving plate or baking pan. Spoon the topping evenly on cut surfaces of Brie. Bake in 350F/180C oven for about 8-10 minutes or until cheese is beginning to melt. Sprinkle parsley or chives on top to garnish if desired. Serve with thinly sliced whole wheat baguette or plain crackers. Makes 12.

Mushroom, Chicken and Leek Pot Pie

Preparation:

1. Cut chicken into ¾-inch (2 cm) cubes. In large non-stick saucepan or deep skillet, heat 1 tbsp (15 ml) of the oil over medium-high heat. Cook chicken until lightly browned but still pink inside, about 3-4 minutes. Spoon into 6 cup (1.5 l) baking dish or deep pie plate.
2. Reduce heat to medium and add remaining oil to same pan. Sauté leeks, mushroom and tarragon for 2-3 minutes; cover and cook about 3 minutes or until vegetables are softened. Sprinkle in flour and stir to blend. Gradually stir in chicken stock, salt and pepper. Bring to boil and stir until thickened. Spoon mixture over chicken. Invert thawed pie shell over casserole pressing pastry edge to baking dish and crimp or flute the edges. Cut 3-4 slits in pastry. Bake in 425°F (220°C) oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 4.

The kids will go crazy for these cakes

Whether you serve these catfish cakes on their own or tucked into a whole-grain bun with a dollop of tartar sauce, the delicate flavour is the right choice for dinner

Your kids will love these tasty catfish cakes.

Catfish Cakes

Preparation:

1. In a shallow saucepan, bring 750 ml (3 cups) of water to a boil. Reduce to simmer and add catfish fillets. Simmer for about 10 minutes or until fish flakes when tested with a fork. Remove fillets from water, drain well and let cool.
2. Flake fish into a large bowl. Add onion, celery, red pepper, parsley and tarragon. In a small bowl, whisk together mayonnaise, egg and mustard. Stir into fish mixture until combined. Add 175 ml (3/4 cup) of the cracker crumbs to mixture and stir until well combined.
3. Place remaining cracker crumbs into a shallow dish. Using about 75 ml (1/3 cup) of the mixture, shape into desired shapes and coat both sides with remaining cracker crumbs. Repeat with all the mixture to form 12 patties.
4. In a large non-stick skillet, heat about 30 ml (2 tbsp) of the oil over medium-high heat and pan-fry catfish cakes in batches for about 8 minutes, turning once, adding more oil if necessary, until golden. Serve with tartar sauce, if using. Makes 4 servings.

The heart of Harlem

Harlem's first major hotel since famed Theresa closed in 1967 is Starwood Aloft

When a trendy Starwood boutique hotel called Aloft opens in Harlem later this month, it will be the neighbourhood's first major hotel since the famed Theresa closed in 1967.

Harlem is already a must-see for many visitors to New York, but the tourism industry believes the opening of this hotel will help make the area even more of a destination by encouraging people to stay overnight or longer.

"Instead of just going up to visit Harlem, you can stay in Harlem," said George Fertitta, head of NYC & Company, the city's tourism and marketing agency.

The Aloft is one of about 100 new hotels to open in the city since 2007. A number of other hotel projects planned for Harlem were abandoned or delayed by the recession.

▶ a retro style clock on a nightstand inside a room at the new Aloft Hotel in Harlem

Fertitta acknowledged that the opening of Harlem's first hotel in over 40 years has been a long time coming. "The interest in Harlem from tourists on a global basis is extraordinary. It's one of the top spots in New York City that people want to see."

Big Apple Greeter, which offers free tours led by volunteer New Yorkers, gets more requests for Harlem than any other neighbourhood except Greenwich Village. And double-decker tour buses pull up all day long on 125th Street outside the Apollo Theater, which attracts 2.5 million visitors a year for in-house tours and its famous Wednesday Amateur Night.

▶ Brian McGuinness, senior vice president of Aloft Hotels, stands in the lobby of the new Aloft Hotel in Harlem

Apollo CEO Jonelle Procope said the Aloft "will be a nice addition to the neighbourhood, and will only increase Harlem's appeal to tourists."

Standing outside the Apollo, you can still see the sign for the old Hotel Theresa, located in a landmarked building that now houses offices. The Theresa was a haven for prominent African-Americans in an era when they weren't welcome at hotels elsewhere.

"Lena Horne, Ella Fitzgerald — all these people would come to the Theresa when there wasn't an option to go downtown," said William Gibbons, who teaches a course on the history of Harlem at City College, which is Harlem's branch of the City University of New York. "In its heyday at the Theresa, on any given day, Joe Louis would be in the bar having a drink. Malcolm X was visiting Muhammad Ali."

Who has stayed there

Guests In 1960, the Theresa's guest roster included Fidel Castro, in town to speak at the United Nations. It was the height of the Cold War, and the Cuban Communist was reportedly asked to leave a hotel downtown because his delegation was too rowdy. One story claimed his entourage had brought in live chickens. But he was welcomed at the Theresa, where his visitors included Malcolm X and Soviet leader Nikita Khrushchev.

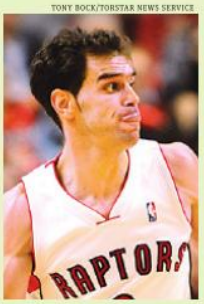
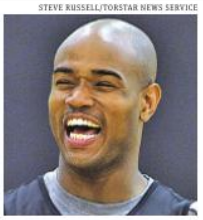
Point guards

TONY BOCK/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE



Jose Calderon
He's not shooting particularly well, just 30 per cent from the floor and he's missed all seven three-pointers he has attempted in four games. But his assist-to-turnover ratio of 4:1 is solid. He seems to mesh well with the more half-court oriented groups coach Jay Triano has run out there.

STEVE RUSSELL/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE



Jarrett Jack
Was stellar down the stretch and in overtime of Wednesday's victory over the Sixers, leading the team with 24 points. He plays at a quicker tempo than Calderon, which meshes well with the likes of Amir Johnson, Sonny Weems and Leandro Barbosa but he's also committed a team-high 10 turnovers to just 20 assists. He's hot from the field, though, 4-for-4 from three-point range.

Andrea Bargnani
Dreadful start to the exhibitions season, he has missed 37 of a team-high 48 field goal attempts in four games (23 per cent shooting) and he's been a lacklustre defender at times. Still, Triano says he's not worried about the seven-footer's production and Bargnani does remain the only guy virtually assured a starting role

NATHAN DENETTE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Amir Johnson
The recipient of a lucrative contract as a free agent in the summer, the young big man continues to be the team's most energetic front-court player and leads the Raptors in rebounds through four games. He's still got a propensity to foul too often that causes concern among the coaches.

Reggie Evans
Slimmed down and in shape, the veteran has started two games alongside Bargnani to help boost the team's rebounding efforts. The trouble is, he's a notoriously bad free throw shooter and that may mean they can't count on him to be on the floor in the dying minutes of close games because teams will foul him.

David Andersen
A big man with deep shooting range rather than someone who can protect the paint defensively, he's a front-court specialist who isn't likely to crack the rotation for any significant role.

Argos, Ticats to square off for sole possession of second spot

HAMILTON TORONTO

▶ Time: 7:30 p.m., Friday
Channel: TSN

Hamilton coach Marcel Bellefeuille won't need to give a stirring pre-game speech to get his Tiger-Cats motivated for Friday's game against the Toronto Argonauts.

The opportunity to gain a stranglehold on second spot in the East Division should be incentive enough.

The archrivals will both take 7-7 records into the game at Rogers Centre. But Hamilton could take a huge step towards securing the No. 2 spot — and home field for the conference semifinal — with a win, having already clinched the season series between the two teams.

"If you get the win, it puts you (in a very good spot)," Bellefeuille said. "Not because you have the plus-two points but because you also have the tiebreaker.

"For us, it is a four-point game. That's just the reality of the situation. It doesn't guarantee you anything but it certainly gets you a lot closer to where you want to be."

Hamilton is 2-0 this season against Toronto, winning 16-12 at Rogers Centre Aug. 20 before registering a 28-13 home Labour Day victory Sept. 6.

Of significance to Argos head coach Jim Barker is his club's first loss to the Ticats followed a 37-22 victory over the Montreal Alouettes.

That's worth noting because Toronto is coming off a huge 24-19 road win over Saskatchewan, the Riders first home loss of the season.

"For us, it's about being able to handle the success we had last week in Mosaic and come back and play well," Barker said.

"The last time we played this club (at Rogers Centre) we came off a win against Montreal and we didn't handle it very well.

"They were very ready to play, just like I know they will be (Friday). They're very well coached and I know their players understand the importance of this game. It should be a great battle."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

22K

Barker said he hopes Argos fans flock to the Rogers Centre to support the squad against Hamilton. But that could be asking a lot as Toronto has averaged less than 22,000 fans per game and in its last home contest — a 27-16 loss to Saskatchewan Oct. 9 — many of the 23,873 spectators donned Riders green.

▶ Talk about intriguing storylines. If the Rangers and Phillies were to meet in the World Series, Texas starter Cliff Lee would pitch against his former team.

Lee could be the difference

Texas starter may be just what the Rangers need to finally overcome Yankees in the playoffs ◐ Philadelphia's H2O trio makes it a favourite

Who's up for watching the Philadelphia Phillies take on former ace Cliff Lee in the World Series?

That's one of many intriguing possibilities with the baseball playoffs now down to four teams, and the one this observer feels is most likely to happen.

Thanks to Lee, who dominated Tuesday's decisive Game 5 against the Tampa Bay Rays, the Texas Rangers won their first ever playoff series and advanced to the American League Championship Series versus the New York Yankees, rekindling a one-sided rivalry from a decade ago.

Having lost division series to New York in 1996, '98 and '99, the difference this time may very well be Lee, who won both games for the Phillies last year when they fell in six games to the Yankees in the World Series.

The Phillies traded Lee last December in order to get Roy Halladay, the longtime Toronto Blue Jays ace who threw a no-hitter in his playoff debut. Feeling they were thin on pitching, the Phillies also picked up Roy Oswalt from the Houston Astros during the summer to dramatically boost their rotation that also includes 2008 World Series MVP Cole Hamels.

H2O, as the trio has been dubbed, will be front and centre in the National League Championship Series against the young guns of the San Francisco Giants. Tim Lincecum, Matt Cain, Jonathan Sanchez and Madison Bumgarner starred against the Atlanta Braves, but the Phillies lineup will pose a much sterner test.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

ALCS
First game:
Friday 8:07 p.m.
Lowdown:
The Yankees rotation is still far from stable behind CC Sabathia, as they can't be sure what they'll get from Andy Pettitte (coming off groin injury), Phil Hughes (workload concerns) and A.J. Burnett (inconsistent) on any given night.
The Rangers feel a bit safer on that front with C.J. Wilson, Colby Lewis and Tommy Hunter, which means their lineup may not need to do the same heavy lifting New York's does.
Pick: Rangers in seven

NLCS
First game:
Saturday 7:57 p.m.
Lowdown:
The Philadelphia lineup boasts the likes of Ryan Howard, Chase Utley, Jayson Werth, Jimmy Rollins and Shane Victorino, and should grind down the San Francisco four far more than the depleted Braves. At the same time San Francisco's offence is less productive than that of the Reds. Buster Posey, Cody Ross, Pat Burrell and Aubrey Huff had a tough time versus Atlanta, and it's only going to get harder for them.
Pick: Phillies in six

WHY THE GAMES CAME TO INDIA

The XIX Commonwealth Games in New Delhi were in a hot, crowded place and they got off to an extremely slow start.

The athlete's village, which was supposed to be the jewel, wasn't ready and its unsanitary conditions threatened to keep many of the 6,000 athletes from 71 countries and territories home in the safety of Europe, Australia or Canada.

But the athletes showed up en masse in spite of Delhi's deficiencies. Everyone crossed their fingers, rolled up their sleeves and got down to the business of competing at one of the world's historic multi-sport gatherings.

Somehow, it all worked out.

The momentum that developed was striking. Athletes took over with their performances and diverted attention from what was lacking in the host city to what was present in the spirit of international sport.

By the middle of these Commonwealth Games, once tickets got into the hands of the public, the magnificent stadiums filled up.

There was also a vibrant atmosphere that flourished because the Indian athletes excelled once given the chance to compete on home soil and before adoring crowds.

In wrestling, world champion Sushil Kumar delivered overwhelming Commonwealth gold.

The people were literally hanging from the balcony trying to get a look at him.

The noise from 60,000 fans at Nehru Stadium was deafening as they urged on the surprise winners of the women's 4x400-metre relay.

It was inspiring to hear the Indians belt out their national anthem in unison.

"There's a lot more to this than winning medals," said Diane Cummins, the Canadian who won the 800-metre bronze.

"I guarantee you that most of the spectators here haven't been to an international meet of this calibre. If it's not for us, it's for the people. It takes a competition like this in a country like this for our sport to grow. That's why I'm here."

Those sentiments were echoed by Sebastian Coe, the chairman of the London 2012 organizing committee.

Coe is a former Commonwealth and Olympic champion himself and one of the world's most respected figures in sport.

"If we want the benefits that sport creates then we need to build a global capacity for sport," Coe figured.

"That means you occasionally have to take it out of your own backyard to more challenging places. Is it worth it? Yes it is. Smart people think their way through it."

In the end that's what the athletes did. They embarked on New Delhi with open minds and the willingness to make the best of it.

That's why the Games came to India.

India knocks Canada off the medal podium

Canada falls out of top three at Games for first time since 1962

Flag-bearer

- Cyclist Tara Whitten was Canada's flag-bearer at Thursday's closing ceremonies of the Commonwealth Games.
- Whitten won four medals during the Games.
- The 30-year-old from Edmonton took the gold in the individual time trial. She also won three bronze medals in track cycling.

For the first time in 48 years, Canada failed to crack the top three at the Commonwealth Games, muscled off the podium by a mighty host Indian team the Canadians didn't see coming.

Riding the swell of a country's pride, India used homefield advantage that could have been Canada's to roar to an impressive 101 medals, including 38 gold.

"We did not anticipate our counterparts in India to do as well as they did," said Scott Stevenson, Commonwealth Games Canada's director of sport.

"We knew they would do better than they did in Melbourne (India won 50 medals four years ago) but we didn't anticipate them virtually doubling their medal count," Stevenson added.

"Our hats go off to them."

The New Delhi Games wrapped up Thursday, bringing an end to a problem-plagued project that began in 2003 when the Indian capital beat out Hamilton for the right to host the event.

Australia won the most medals with 177, including 74 gold, while India finished second in the official standings, which are calculated by gold medals.

England finished with 142 total medals, but was third based on its 37 golds. Canada's team of 251 athletes finished fourth, winning 75 overall and 26 gold.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 Being the go-getting Aries you are you may be tempted to make a hurried decision, but deep down you know it needs to be dealt with slowly and deliberately.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You have been working extremely hard these past few weeks and have reached the point where if you push yourself much further it could damage your health.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You are in the mood to take a few risks and, yes, they may well pay off. Risk is one thing, foolhardiness quite another.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Someone is making unfair demands of you and seems to believe that you will do as they say because you are timid and scared of creating a scene.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 You cannot expect other people to be reasonable today but you must be reasonable yourself.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Go on the attack today. Let the world know that you will never allow yourself to be pushed around. With Mercury, your ruler, linked to ego planet Mars you'll find just the right words to make your point forcefully.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Both in your personal life and professionally you want only the best and will do whatever it takes to get it. That's great, but make sure the goals you are aiming for are your goals, not goals you have inherited from other people.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 . The simple fact is you can't do it all, so identify your number one goal and go after it with everything you've got.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Try not to let slip information that rivals, competitors and enemies (yes, you have a few) can use against you.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 It may be hard to walk away from a situation where you feel hard done by today but that is exactly what you must do. Leave it behind.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Take care not to overreact to what someone says about you today. You won't make things better by sparking off a war of words. Pretend it means nothing to you. Your indifference will hurt them more than your anger.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 It may annoy you that someone just doesn't get what you are trying to tell them but what can you do? The simple fact is they lack your sensitivity, and that's a reason to pity them rather than to condemn them.
